Sarah Tennant

Chief Executive Officer, GIVIT

Sarah Tennant began her career at not-for-profit donation platform GIVIT in 2014, spending more than four years as National Stakeholder Manager before taking on the role of Chief Executive Officer in 2019. Sarah has been instrumental in growing GIVIT from a Queensland-based platform to reach a national audience, facilitating the donation of over five million essential items to people in need across Australia. With a background in science and science communications, Sarah has a passion for creating a sustainable circular economy through diverting quality goods from landfill to support vulnerable communities. She holds a Master of Environmental Science and Law.

About GIVIT

GIVIT is a not-for-profit donation platform that works with more than 4,600 support organisations around Australia to ensure vulnerable people get what they need when they need it most. This includes people recovering from an emergency event, or experiencing hardship due to circumstances such as drought, domestic and family violence, homelessness, disability, and mental health.

Through GIVIT.org.au, offers of goods and services are captured online, removing the need for charities and services to sort, store and dispose of unrequested donations, saving valuable resources. 100% of donated money received by GIVIT to support people in need are used to purchase essential items and services.
